Science teacher Lindsay Knippenberg will travel to the icy continent of Antarctica next month to join a research team as part of the PolarTREC program.

She'll spend 5 weeks assisting with experiments and data collection, and communicating her experiences back to her students at South

Lake High School.

Lindsay took time Wednesday to show her students some of the cold-weather gear she'll be wearing. She'll be writing a daily online journal during her trip, and there are also plans for at least one hour-long webcast from Antarctica.
